Two fresh Russian caravans are reported to have started for Kashgar, and doubtless carried a good store of arms and ammanition. The insurgents continue to hold the southern Corn and rice are being imported from Khokand in consequence of the failure of crops in Kashgar. It is very evident that the connection the people of Kashgar have formed, with Russia is a very intimate one and, backed by Muscovite support, the Chines Government will find the Kashgarian insurrection extremely difficult to quell. The distance from the seat of authority at which the operations have to be carried on increases the expense and trouble of subduing it, and we should not be much surprised at China. being ultimately compelled to acknowledge to try the min Li Achun, charged on remand the independence of Kashgar, which would thereupon, in all probability, become first tributary to, and finally a province of, Russia

THE recent-allegations made by-the Moseo Gazette against England need no refutation. The policy of the Government of Mr. GLAD-NTONE was anything but aggressive; that of Mr. DISEARLY is equally mild and pacific. If the acceptance of Fiji is the sign of an aggressive and-grusping policy we must course admit that the English Governmen is what has been represented by Russian scribes; but as no influence was brought to bear upon the ex-King of those islands to induce him to surrender their sovereignty aggressiveness. The Moscow Gazette gravely announces that, in Australia, England has annexed New Guinea. The value of the snoposed mineral wealth of the island also was at present a matter of anceulation. His lordsbip admitted that there would be great difficulty in checking the practice of kidnoppping if they allowed the south eastern part of New Guinea to pass into the hands of foreigners, but at the same time the deputation must remember that it was impossible to appropriate every territory and every island. A bill which was now passing through the House of Lords would, he thought, meet many of the abuses which at present exist in conpection with this question of kidnapping and be thought that these waters in the neighbour bood of the south-eastern part of New Guines might be very fairly and properly included within the jurisdiction of the High Commissioner of Fut. THE REV. JOSEPH EDKINS OF

The Edinburch Daile Review Says :- We are sure that if the Senatus of Edinburgh University had known as much of the accomplishments of Mr. Joseph Edkins, B.A., of London University, in his true character of a Sinologue as they probably do of Divinity, this able scholar and suggestive writer would henceforth bave LL.D. after bis name. But D.D. fitly recognises his zeal as a missionary and phianthropist, a character in which, like Livingetone, he doubtless desires to be chiefly known, He is, perhaps, second only to Dr. Legge, the unapproachable commentator on Confucius i and Mencius, as a Chinese scholar. WRECK OF THE STEAMER "VENTURA." The American steamer Vontera struck on a rook near Montarey on the 20th April, and ultimately went down, but the passengers and crows were all saved. A Mr. Erringer who was on board at the time, gives description of the scene immediately preceding the wreck. Several ludies, with two or three gentlemen, were in the Captain's room at hulf past 7 in the evening. The ship had been running along well off shore, and was steering straight, as the Captain supposed, for Point Concepcion. The for frequently lifted and then settled down Busin in a donse pail. About half-past 7 one of the ladies remarked that she believed she would retire, and laughingly asked the Captain if the ship was all right. He replied that it was, and told the lady high-praise, for both-our Consular service and to go to sleep in perfect security. A short the American Legation have produced men while after the lookout reported that he thought like Alabaster and Williams. But since the be saw in the fog a light on the port bow. The days of Dr. Morrison, the first translator Captain said: "I guess that's the Constantino; we'll give her a salute." He blew the whistle three times, but there was no answer. In a few minutes the lookout reported that he thought their right to stand at the head of all scholars, he heard a vessel blowing off steam. The Cap-Southern, Dr. Wilson in Western, and Dr. thing, told the man he guessed he must be tain listened, but as he couldn't hear anvmistaken, for if it were a vessel she must bo very close, and would certainly have answered the Ventura's whistle. It was about two... minutes after that said Mr. Erringer, that the for lifted a little ahead, and the lookout yelled out. "Breakers on the port bow!" The Captain aprang to the upper dook and spized the bell pull. At the same instant a hoge black rock dashed by on the port side. The bell was pulled to stop the engine, but before the Engineer could rock ahead. She seemed to rebound from this and get sternboard, when a wave lifted her and brought her down with terrific force on a rock astern. This swang her bow round, when the swell backed her into the wedge-like oradle that she now lies in. She thumped considerably, which frightened the passengers, but as soon na her hold filled with water she lay as quiet as if in a dry dock. A ourious point, with regard to certain rights | chong-yue to travelling trader. of authors and managers, has recently been settled in the Supreme Court of New York. The facts appear to be that in 1870 Mr Schonberg, a dramatist, who had prepared a translation or adaptation of the French drama "Fernunde," received from the agent of Ma Arthur Cheney, then proprietor of Selwyn's Theatre (now the Globe), of Boston, a telegram usking the terms on which he could have the play, and whether be could announce it for May the 7th, to which Mr. Schonberg replied by telegraph that the price was 20 dollars per night, and that it could be announced for May 7th. To this an answer was sent accepting the terms. The play was not produced by the defendant, and after the close of the season the manuscript was sent back to the plaintiff. the plaintiff brought his action for 5,000 dols. damages, whilst the defendant contended that at the worst he need only pay 20 dols, for the final decision is in favor of the defendant ; and the moral of the case seems to be that authors, in America at all events, should look sharply after the wording of their business contracts. Some very interesting suggestions with regard to the reformation of the ballet have aprung from one of the fast quarters in which we should have expected to find them. In the course of a scholarly and thoroughly poetic sketch of Helen of Troy, a writer in the Cornacl observes that it would be difficult to find a better subject for a grand ballet than is provided by this exquisite legand; but he has to qualify the suggestion by the proviso, "if the ballet could ever become, as seems not quite impossible, a work of serious art." This bold proposal grows upon him as he makee it, and he goes on to point out that the "something which is always wanted to unassisted instrumental music" might best be afforded by supplying "a living, moving, elastic programme of pastomime by restoring Terpsichore to ber right place among the Muses." And then, elaborating his hint, he affirms that " a legend like that of Helen is eminently auited to suggest a bundred symphonies of passion and emotion; its varied situations bring into play the whole range of human feelings - love fear, grief, jealousy, athletic strile, the anguish of men and nations, the pathos of distress, the victory of heroes over death-of auch spiritual stuff is its very aubstance woven." In the expression of all this, music, which, by itself, is for various reasons inadequate, "finds a whole rhythm of interpretative illustration in the movement of the limbs, the poses of the body, Ten Dollars. and the expression of the features," Finally, he proposes that "the danging element should be subordinated to the artistic effects aimed at by the Ton Dichter," and suggests as other subjects fitted for illustration by this species | Hongkong and China by Messra, J. & R.
